tion to the plain teachings of Holy Writ.

The people of New York are evidently advocates of a literal construction of the Sacred writings. They go in for the ball, and "go it with a vengoance." During the winter just past, and the spring just begun, there have been more balls—and of the most select and respectable character—than have ever taken of our oldest sportive inhabitants. The Firemen's ball; the Arion ball, the Liederkranz ball and the magnificent Charity ball, succeeded each other in rapid and ibrilliant succession, and last night the season was very mirable management, and in respectability of attendance, That was the most select and brilliant affair of the kind ever gotten up in the metropolis, in the humble opinion

But, leaving the Charity ball out of the question, that of the Purim association last night was fully equal to any of the others.

HISTORY OF PURIM.

Purim is essentially Israelitish. It is peculiarly a Jowish institution. Young Israel and old Israel and all Israel delicht in it; and good reason they have for doing so, as will be seen further on.

The origin of the Purim festival is to be found in the book of Esther, and may be sketched in a brief form as follows:—In the days of Ahasmerus, or Artacerzes, who reigned over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, from India to Ethiopia, there lived a wily Macedonian named Haman, who stood next to the king in power and glory and found great favor in the royal presonce. All bent the knee to Haman, exc.pt a stubborn old son of Israel, named Mordocal, who considered such respect should only be paid to the Almighty. Haman "was exceedingly angry" when he heard of this, and resolved to destroy the entire nation of Jews that were in the kingdom of Ahasuerus, in revenge for the slight cust upon him by Mordocal. Artaxerxes was easily persuaded by his favorite to sanction the slaughter, especially as it was represented to him that the Jews despised his ordinances and observed laws and ceremonies unrecognized by the Medes and Persians. In carrying out his intentions, Haman resorted to a diabolical species of draft, which consisted in casting lots into an urn to decide as to what day and what month the massacre should take place. The thirteenth day of the twelfth month came out of the urn, and orders were accordingly sent to every part of the kingdom to "destroy all the Jews, both young and old, Illie children and women," on that day. It happened that Esther, the queen of Artaxerxes, was of the Jowish nation, and that Mordecai was her uncle; but the king was ignorant of both facts, and therefore gave himself not rouble on the subject. But net so Eather and Mordecai. The latter put on sackcloth and strewed his head with ashes, and went crying through the streets of the other la enemes of the Jows should be put to death on the same day that Haman appointed for the slaughter of the Israelletse. The royal mandate was strictly carried out, and the number of those slain in retailation for Haman's wickedness amousted to seventy-five thousand. The next day—the 14th of the month Adar—the Jews left off the slaughter and enjoyed a splendid holiday, with feasting, jay and banquets. From that thus to the present the 14th of the month Adar, corresponding to the 14th of March, has been observed as a grand holiday by the people of Israel in commemoration of their driv rance by Q-een Esther. The day is given to joy and social festivities. Presents are exchanced among ir ends, surprise parties take place, old acquaintances visit each other, the scattered branches of families come together, and the occasion in many respects is kept up much in the same spirit as New Year's day. One of the most laudable features of the celebration consists in the distrib tion of alms to such members of the fault as may stand in need of assistance. Only about four years ago, however, was the idea of having a grand masquerade built in honor of the featival put into practical shap: by a few enterprising young men.

From all this it will be seen that the ball is, in a measure, of scriptural origin, and this is our apology for quoting so copiously from the secred writings, both in support of the propriety of balls and also in relation to the history of Purim. It will be noticed also that the modern representatives of the house of Israel have vastly improved upon the manners of their ancestors. Instead of slaughtering thousands, as they did in the distress and cultivale the heavenly virtue of charity. Instead of dancing with savage joy over the blood of their focs, they content themselves with masquerad ng, and become worshippers of the divine Terpsichore. The change strikingly illustrates the progress of modern civilization.

But let us return to the ball. The Academy was crowded, and the dresses and decorations were all that

The Purise Gazette.

This was only one part of the comicality. Contempiating the crowd, you found there so many things to admire and laugh at that it was hard to decide which was best. The Purise Gazette came in for a good share of chromium. The Gazette was a sprightly little paper for the occasion, containing jokes on all subjects, Jewish puns and poetic effusions. As a specimen we many extract the following lively versification of the Purisin story:—

Haman was a wretched villain, And his heart was full of guile; Whiskey drank he by the gallon, Till his liver turned to bile.

The King he was a jolly fellow,
And he loved wine, women, song;
But his skin, it was so yellow,
And his name was very long.

Haman to the King said one day, Let us hang up all the Jewa; And I wish you'd do it Monday, For then the clothes lines we could u

And when Esther heard that Haman Asked this favor from the King, She said, "you ugly old highwayman, Eer your spite I'll make you swing."

Now when the King saw little Esther Sitting on a barren rock, ng on a barren rock, proached her and addressed her, he asked her what's o'clock.

So, then, Esther up and told him All about that wicked man, Till his feelings quite controlled him, When she did unfold her plan.

And she said you good old fellow, On this gallows, on this same 'un, Wou't it be a high old sell, oh! Let's hang up this hideous Haman! Now that's why we keep up Purim In this gay and festive hall; And you'd better see that you're in For the next great Purim ball.

tainment, to wit:—

It is hard to describe people you see unless you can get a peep at their faces. Such was the predicament of our reporter last evening. He beheld the most bewitching little figures, gliding about in fairylike motions—Sitting past like beings of another and better worle—but their faces were hidden behind the provoking masks, and only just enough was visible to create the desire for mora Any one of those sweet forms could doubtless match with that of Eather herself, with all her famous beauty and recorded aplendor. In the boxes alone one saw loveliness unmasked, and the display there was certainly very brilliant. We doubt if New York could send out a more formidable array of female beauty. Israel has no cause to blush for her daughters on the score of personal attractions.

OUR KEY WEST CORRESPONDENCE.

The Attack on Fort Meyers—Cupture of the Pickets—The Margaret Ker Still Ashers, de. I have just received some important information re-specting the attack on Fort Meyers, up the Florida coast.

In consequence of the scarcity of forage the mounted pickets that were usually posted three miles from the fort were posted on foot one-half that distance. The consequence was that the rebels, who must have find good information of the state of affairs, actually captured the pickets on the morning of the 20th uit, and the first intimation of the affair was the appearance of the rebel force before the fort, and a demand, under a fing of truce, to surrender in twenty minutes. This demand, was signed by Major Footman, of the rebel service. Captain James Doyle, in command of Fort Meyers, bythe-by, did not send to tell the rebel officer that he would see him damned first, but he sent Captain Bartholf, of the Second United States colored regiment, to inform the Major that he (Captain Doyle) thought he could hold the fort, and therefore he declined surrendering it. Captain Bartholf describes Major Footman's conduct as being perfectly courteous and gentlemanly.

Ten minutes after Captain Bartholf's return from the front fire was opened by the rebels from two twelve-pounders, most of which fell short, though some of the shells burst in the fort, severely injuring some women and children. The fort itself only mounted two pieces, six-pounders, which were well served by Captain Dewey. The cannonade was kept up during the whole children. The fort itself only mounted two pieces, six-pounders, which were well served by Captain Dowey. The cannonade was kept up during the whole afternoon, during which a line of skirmishers was thrown out, and in the meantime the steamer Alliance was sent to Key West with the news, as mentioned in a previous letter.

In addition to the capture of the pickets, about a dozen men who were out of the garrison, engaged in hunting, washing, taking eare of cattle, &c., wore captured. One man—Henry canders, of Company I, United States colored regiment—was killed.

The enemy made their appearance before the fort in evident expectation of finding a reduced garrison, which they would have found had they arrived only two days earlier. The fact is just this: the fort was surprised, and nothing but the buil-dog courage of Captain Doyle and his command saved Fort Moyers from capture. Captain Bartholf may consider himself a lucky man. A woman saw a man attempt to pick him off from behind a tree three times; but he ecaped.

The United States steamer Cherokee arrived here from Havana this morning.

The Captain of the British ship Margaret Ker, of Greenock, has arrived here with most of his crew. The vessel is still on shore at Crow's reef, and is a total wreck. A quantity of sugar has been saved, and the Captain has det-rimined not to "give up the ship." He has stuck to her, personally or by deputy, throughout.

Sales of sugars recovered from the Margaret Ker brought yesterday $2,500.

The prize schooner John Hale and cargo were recently sold for $14,000. The schooner Della, in the same category, brought $4,100.

The Concentration Before Richmond.
THE REBLE ANTICITATING THE FAILURE OF GRANT'S ANACONDA TACTICS.

(From the Richmond Examiner, March 18.)
All thought of peace is for the present—to use Gederal Sherman's expression—"disposed of," and we are already in the midst of the spring campaigs, which promises to be a most active one. While Sherman is still struggling northward, though under considerable difficulties, to co-operate with Grant before Richmond, it is not uncessonable to conclude that the business of our community is nothing but war until that present peril is disposed of. And it now seems likely to be so in a manner tolerably satisfactory. We cannot indulge the enemy with any minute information concerning the events which are passing in North and South Carolina, but the intelligence already published officially is enough to show us the position of criminals evading and polong as possible the day of lawful retrour crimes, but no more presuming circ retaliation than a band of skulkir would pretent to retaliate, as bellight the sheriff and the posse considers. our crimes, but no more presuming to exercise retaliation than a band of skulking outlaws would pretend to retaliate, as belligerents, upon the sheriff and the pose consists. General Hampton has put an end to this delusion; and when Sherman writes to him, with his usual affectation of superiority, that he understands twenty-seven of his "foragers" have been "murdered," and that he has ordered a similar number of prisoners in his hands "to be disposed of in like manner," Hampton stornly replies by reminding him that there is such a thing as the law of war—that he (Sherman) and the troops under his command, have habitually violated that law by "firing the dwellings of those cutterns whom they have robbed"—that accordingly he (General Hampton) has ordered this men to shoot down any marauders found so employed as if they were wild beasts; and that in the meantims he holds fity-six of Sherman's men as hostages for those whom Sherman had ordered to be executed. Sherman's letter to Hampton is dated February 24, and the reply on the 27th. General Sherman at that time said, "I hold about a thousand prisoners, espitured in various ways, and can stand it as long as you." The prisoners captured in various ways of course include such non-combatant Confederate as he has thought proper to arrest; and he thus signifies his intention to "murder" those peaceful citizens dragged from their own hearths, in retaliation for the execution of his thevish "foragers" caught burning houses. Thus he boasts that he can stand it as long as the other. Since the date of the letters, indeed, our forces have captured about two thousand federal soldiers in fair fight; but probably General Sherman means to make the balance even by picking up a number of old men, or even women, and making them answer Hampton's murders" "to the extent of life for life." There would be nothing new in this; for the Yankee Wyld in North Carolina had the brutality to arrest ladies and put them in frons, and notify General Pickett that he would retailate upon them whate both for property and for fife, good omens may be drawn for the campaign on which we now enter.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

Our Albany Co. respondence. A. BANY, March 14, 1868.

LIBUTENANT GOVERNOR ALV. MD'S MISSION. ation of Governor Penton, relative to the ent of the draft, has as much significancy in legislation here as it has in portance to the people at large in the State. The Licutes ant Governor was despatched to Washington after consultation here to procure this postponement. He stated to the President and the officials, in substance, what was the real occasion of delay in raising recruits, and demonstrated that a suspension of the draft would at this time be the a peediest method of now filling the quota. He stated, as the official representative of the Senate, that the measures for enabling the towns and counties of the official representative of the Senate, that the means rea necessary for enabling the towns and counties of the State to raise money for volunteering had not been matured, and could not have been passed until so recent a day that there was actually no time lost by the towns and cities, except in waiting upon the Logislature for the necessary enactments. So much disorder has arisen in the counties throughout the State in raising money, that four bills have been passed have in succession before the subject has been at last practically reached. It is now cortain, however, that the quota of the State can be enforced. It was the logical demonstration of this latter fact which enabled Governor Alvord to persuade the President to postpone the draft.

The number of arrivals here from all parts of the State have increased with every train. The executive appointments make the attraction. To morrow being the day of executive session, a large batch of appointments are anticipated. Congressmen Raymond and Darling, Postmaster Kelly, ex. Surveyor Andrews, and a long list of the political propellers of the two united Union organizations of New York city are here in attendance. A good deal of gossip and conjecture prevails; but the result for to-morrow will be that the Governor will send in but very few of his appointments. It is probable that three or four of the Port Wardens may be reappointed—such as Tompkins, Burleigh and Bramhall. But the Harbor Masters, Auditor, Bank Superintendent and the more important State appointments, will be held over for some time.

A general caucus is talked of and urged here for tomorrow night. The idea is to head off the influence of alleged large sums of money sent up from New York to defeat party measures pending here that may affect patronage.

More City Railroads Proposed.

ALBANY, March 14, 1865.
The public is not probably aware that during the excitement attending the discovery of petroleum wells and gold and silver mines, a few of our public spirited citi gens are engaged upon a rich nugget much more easily got at, nearer home and promising quite as much profit. I refer to the efforts now being used at Albany by a few distinguished fellow citizens, for the purpose of giving us a Broadway Railroad for their special benefit, few distinguished fellow citizens, for the purpose of giving us a Broadway Railroad for their special benefit, also adding to the obligations our people are aiready under to the proprietors of the "gridiron tracks," by providing cross town railroads through Cortlands, Maiden lane, John and Doy streets; through Chambers and Duane streets; through Ninth, Tenth and Christopher streets, and thus extending upwards and across the kinned at intervals, so that a railroad will finally be like the poor, "always with us" and at every house door. That these public gritted gentlemen who are thus aiding our citizens in developing this nugget for private profit may not rest in obscurity, I give their names:—

In the Broadway grant, the grantess in the bill, which has already been favorably reported by the Committee on Railroads in the Senate, composed of Messra. Angel, Woodroff, Beach and Williams—Senator Hobbe objecting—are: Jesse A. Marshall, Charles Johnson, Charles E. Milbank, Edgar Rogers, James Murphy, Charles Rright, Isaac Hendritz, John Dwyer, William H. Hays, James Wilson Green, Robert Marshall, Rufus Rhodes and Jenkins Van Schalck.

In the Crosstown bill, reported by the same committee, and which seems locked in embrace with Broadway, the grantees are:—Henry Smith, Jared Glison, James H. Benedict, Sheridan Shook, Hiram H. Abbout, William F. Russell, Jay S. Trant, Alanson S. Page, John T. Conover, Horsee M. Burch, Charles H. Truesdale, Samuel Schafter, Wallace Warren, John Eikel, Robert Brower, Henry N.
